American Wines with A European Accent

Saturday, September 13th from 7-10pm

Few people know that if it were not for the European immigrants that came to America who brought grape stock from Europe in the 1800's, the European wine industry today may not exist. In the 1880's in France & Spain a root disease, phylloxera, practically destroyed all the vineyards! Most of these European vineyards were revived using American root stock.

So let's celebrate these early American wine pioneers by looking at some wines that are thought to be classically European but are made in the good ole' USA! Mike from Bon Vivant will be here to present these wines to us!

Please bring an appetizer with a European accent to share! We'll taste test your delicious creations and present the winner with a bottle of wine!

Cost: $12 per person, please RSVP
